The astute hunter who exhaustively researched the HWOW and brown bag contents will recognize these variables as song titles to the winners of various years of Eurovision. Behold the calculation of your wildest imagination. Nothing too fancy mind you. By swapping out the song title with its winning point value that year, you have a rather simple math equation. Now let your brain do that magic PEMDAS dance.

$$\begin{aligned} &365 \times (498 - 21^2) - (29^2 + 47 \times (143 + \sqrt{49})) + 24 \times 32^2 \\ &365 \times 57 - (841 + 47 \times 150) + 24 \times 1024 \\ &20805 - 7891 + 24576 \\ &37490 \div 230 = 163 \end{aligned}$$

Oh yes that line for My Number One is also a song title. Review the Eurovision list to find out who won with 163 points. In 1999 the song Take Me to Your Heaven by Charlotte Nilsson of Sweden wins with 163 points

Everyone has been on zoom so far this year, so hopefully we all know how to use it by now. Right? Well as the hunters watch this recorded Treasure Hunt Committee meeting unfold, they will witness some of the most stereotypical gaffs that Boomers make on zoom: muting issues, face filter issues, camera malfunctions... The Gen Z or Zoomers on the call reach out to correct them, always directing them to the Three Dot Menu. How many times do you need to be told to go to the three dots?

Hunters attempting to decode the Morse code in this clue will notice the letters make no sense. The word "NOT" is the clue to solving the puzzle. The HWOW link to "Complement Arithmetic" explains how to perform 1's complement arithmetic on binary numbers. The insightful Hunter may realize that Morse code symbols are binary in nature, and swapping dots with dashes produces valid Morse code.

Decoding the 'flipped' Morse code produces the phrase: "Victory goes to the player who makes the next to last mistake" [Something to ponder for the 1st and 2nd place Hunt winners...]

Anyway, this sounds like a quote by somebody. The Brown Bag page "Good Quotes and Wise Quotations" provides a large number of quotes. Locating this quote (or even just the first word 'victory') shows the quote was by 'Chess-master Savielly Grigorievitch Tartakower'.

Hunters find a map table at the site with four strange plastic puzzle pieces. Fortunately, the Binder page provides the initial clue: "Answer the three questions then consider how the answers intersect." Geometrically-inclined hunters may recall the Trilateration link on the HWOW and the page from the Brown Bag In Memoriam chart.

Hunters can find answers to the three questions from the table: A1: Denholm Elliot, A2: Honor Blackman, A3: Julian Glover, producing codes: A1C2E3, A2E1C3, A2D1B3. The Hunt map has rectangles containing these same codes and a black dot, but what of these puzzle pieces? Assemble the puzzle pieces in the same letter-number sequence as the codes. Place one small hole from either end of the assembled plastic pieces over the black dot within the corresponding rectangle, using the thumbtack to fix the position.

Poke the tip of a pencil or pen in the hole at the other end and draw an arc on the map, pivoting around the thumbtack. And trilateration leads us to find where the three arcs meet: at Circle "MP" for Michael Palin of Monty Python, who perhaps surprisingly, has acted with Sean Connery, Ian Holm, Robert De Nero and Jim Broadbent.

Upon studying the board hunters will see numbers between 1 and 19 printed on each tile. And looking further, they should notice that all rows, columns, and diagonals all add up to 38. But what does 38 suggest? And why is the platform shaped like home plate?

On the HWOW there was a link to the 2001 Arizona Diamondback's World Series roster with all the players and their uniform numbers. In the brown bag there was a sample ballot for the 2021 Baseball Hall of Fame. Where is the overlap? Why, Curt Shilling, the founder of Green Monster Games, wore number 38 and is on the ballot for the 10th and final time!

All signs point to Mr. Shilling, so pitch straight for circle:

You find four seemingly unrelated pictures. Ain't that a woman, a yellow airplane, a dead cat, and a Mars rover? And Daryl Hall seems to be asking John Oates, "How long was this track?"

But that's not just any woman; that's the abolitionist Sojourner Truth. The yellow plane is the mascot of Spirit Airlines. What do you suppose killed the cat, if not curiosity? And the studious hunter will recognize the Mars rover as the theme of this year's hunt: Perseverance. Sojourner, Spirit, Curiosity, and Perseverance. These are four of the five rovers built by NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory and sent to Mars. The only one missing is Opportunity. The picture of Hall & Oates is the cover of their album Ooh Yeah!, on which the track titled "Missed Opportunity" is how long? Four minutes and 47 seconds.

How to kiss with Covid precautions in place? What could you possibly use to Kiss this wizard while also remaining 6' away? Hunters will find the silver Hershey's Kiss in a small bag very handy when using the 6' pole they didn't forget because of the kind reminder on the HWOW. Using those tools, the hunters can give a kiss to the wizard in the kissing booth. The wizard will return the gesture by replacing their candy with a golden hershey's kiss. A kiss for a kiss!

But what to do with a GOLDEN KISS? Those who have done their research will know that this is a common name for the famous painting listed on the HWOW by the one and only, Gustav Klimt.

On your markers? Good thing you have an Official Map Marker in your brown bag! Bring that puppy out and follow the directions on your handy dandy map! By following the directions closely, this is what the clever hunter will draw:

What train ride are we on anyways? The HWOW gave us some important scheduling notes by mentioning that the 3:10 to Yuma would be departing early this day--at 1:01. But there are so many different Yumas on the map! Well if we take a closer look at our new mini-AZ drawing, we will see that one of these Yumas is located in the geographically correct spot... along the 101!

Once you get past the nostalgia and sadness thinking about beloved host Alex Trebek, put your contestant hat on. Alex has given you the answer of "the highest possible winnings of the game below." Well, what is unique about this game of Jeopardy? The very first question is a daily double.

As a prepared hunter, you read the Jeopardy rules on the HWOW-linked Jeopardy page and know the maximum possible daily double wager is the larger of the highest remaining clue value on the board or your current score, the maximum this first question of the game can be worth is $1,000. So the Jeopardy round maximum score is 5 categories of $3,000, plus one category of $2,400 plus $1000, or $18,400. If the daily doubles are each on $400 squares and are chosen last in Double Jeopardy, you can go into Final Jeopardy with $214,400, put it all on the line, and walk away with $428,800.

Hope you didn't forget about the Daily Double being the first square chosen and end up at the $566,400 site along with ~~Mike Richards~~ your Jackass friends.

While it is not unusual for Hunters to encounter random blocks and construction materials in the desert, this seems different. Why is a block hanging from a chain? And why is it labeled "How many hours?" The crypto-astute hunter will immediately catch the reference to blockchains (the new hotness), and will recall seeing a list of top ten non-fungible tokens (which are transferred on blockchains) on the HWOW. Top on that list is an entry that involves the passage of time -- the work "Everydays - The First 5000 Days" by artist @beeples (known as Mike Winkelmann in meatspace), which sold for approximately $69 million.

So, how many hours? It's simple:  $5000 \text{ days} * 24 \text{ hrs/day} = 120,000 \text{ hrs}$ .

The Hunter finds a mathematical operation of planetary symbols, but how to calculate? By using their smarts, of course! The Hunter must use the number that corresponds to each planet in the Solar System (along with the imaginary number  $i$ ) to arrive at the final answer = 4. But where is the 4 on the map? The symbol for the planet Mars is interestingly a circle with an arrow. The Hunter finds this Mars symbol on the map which disguises itself within the other circles around it.

$$[(7*3) - 1]/2 - [1/2 (7+i^2)] + [(8-6)/2] + (5+9)^3 - (7+7) = 4$$

Note: the imaginary number squared ( $i^2$ ) = -1
